Dear Commissioner Henney:

I am writing to ask that the FDA establish a "Daily Reference Value" for added sugar (recommend a limit of 40 grams per day) and to require food labels to disclose how much added sugar a food contains.

I am a registered and licensed dietitian in the state of Florida. I find that the current "Nutrition Facts" label creates a great deal of confusion for my clients. They are unable to determine how much added/refined sugar is in the products they are consuming. As a dietitian, the current food labels create difficulty for me while teaching them how to avoid and recognize sugars.

Sincerely,

Susan B Harrison
